New jobs in store

A real force together - p12&13

SHOP LOCAL: MP Matthew Pennycook and Cllr Danny Thorpe join staff and managers at the new store

by Dan Stephens

A HUNDRED and thirty five local people checked in for work at a new Sainsbury's superstore which opened its doors to customers last week.

The new staff are all residents of the royal borough who won their jobs with help from GLLaB, the royal borough's jobs service.

They started work at the brand new supermarket in Gallions Road, Charlton, which replaces the Sainsbury's Greenwich branch.

The borough's Local Labour and Business scheme (GLLaB) played a key role in ensuring that so many of the newly-hired staff members are local people.

GLLaB's role is all part of the council's ongoing commitment to ensuring greater employment opportunities for its residents. GLLaB supported local residents applying for jobs and fast-tracked GLLaB participants to the interview stage of the recruitment process.

The launch of the new store on June 24 saw local MP Matthew Pennycook join the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration, Cllr Danny Thorpe plus guest and staff to officially declare the Charlton store open for business.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, the council's cabinet member for regeneration and transport said: "I'm delighted to have

Nighttime bus links for all night tube

WITH plans to run the Tube through the night on Friday and Saturday from September, it is important that all areas of the Royal Borough of Greenwich have a night bus link to the Jubilee Line at North Greenwich Station.
It is planned that routes 132 and 486 will operate 24 hours on Fridays and Saturdays between Bexleyheath and North Greenwich Station via Eltham (132) and Queen
Elizabeth Hospital (486) every 30 minutes.
I feel other routes may also need to cover more of the royal borough including routes 161 and 422 – serving Plumstead and Woolwich, Eltham and Mottingham. This may also be time for TfL to upgrade routes 161 and 486 to 24 hour services seven nights a week.

Julian Russell and Richard Stokes, Kidbrooke.

● John Barry, TfL's Head of Network Development for Buses said: "Thank you for the suggestion of running route 486 at night all week and for night services on routes 161 and 422. We are proposing weekend night services on the 132 and 486 to complement Night Tube at North Greenwich. This is in addition to the existing night service all week on routes 108, 188 and 472. We will of course be keeping usage and requests under review when the new tube services start.

In the meantime as mentioned above, we are running a public consultation on changes to the night bus network, ahead of the introduction of the Night Tube.
It ends on 1 July and I would encourage any interested parties to share their views with us."

Dog waste bins needed on Common

IS THERE any chance of putting dog waste bins on Woolwich Common? I'm sure if the bins were there, more people would use them and the Common would not suffer from dog fouling so much.

Mary Simpson, Greenwich Pensioners Forum
● Lt Col R J Christopher, Woolwich Station Commander said: "Woolwich Common is owned by the MOD but is open to the public and it is a cause of constant frustration that litter and dog waste are left to spoil it for other users. In May soldiers from the Barracks cleared two van loads of litter from the Common with council help, and there are waste bins at all the bus stops that ring the Common for people to use.
I am investigating placing additional waste bins on the Common, but with limited money to manage the whole of the military estate in Woolwich I have yet to find an affordable and sustainable way to do so.

"The MOD did place bins on the Common previously, but they had to be removed after being set on fire, so you will understand I have to find a solution that will last. Thank you for highlighting this problem, and I would ask everyone reading this to help me keep the Woolwich Common as clean and tidy as possible by taking all their waste with them to the nearest bin."

Young musicians prepare to hit the high notes at Southbank concert

ALL TOGETHER NOW: pupils from primary and secondary schools are joined by Tommy Blaize, below right, for last week's rehearsals

YOUNG performers were in fine voice for intensive day of rehearsal before a performance at the prestigious Royal Festival Hall this week.

As part of their preparation to perform at the prestigious Royal Festival Hall at London's Southbank Centre for a unique music extravaganza next month.

Four hundred and fifty primary and secondary school pupils from Royal Greenwich will be performing in a unique music extravaganza at London's Southbank centre on Thursday (July 2) at 7.30pm. The event involves pupils from 10 primary schools and five secondary schools who will be showcasing their musical talents.

The 'Celebrate Royal Greenwich Singing Spectacular', is the latest recognition of how successfully music is taught and encouraged in the royal borough's schools.

For their rehearsals last week, the young performers were joined by Tommy Blaize, lead vocalist for the BBC's Strictly Come Dancing.

The rehearsal at Kidbrooke Park primary School followed a band rehearsal at Jools Holland's rehearsal studio in Greenwich. The 11-piece band of industry professionals have previously performed with the likes of Sir Paul McCartney, Stevie Wonder and Robbie Williams.

The concert at the Southbank will feature a massed choir, a performance by the Greenwich Schools' Gospel Choir, the Woolwich Poly Barber Shop, two acapella songs from Plumstead Manor school choir and St Ursula's Chamber Choir.

The primary schools taking part are Brooklands, Windrush Charlton, Mulgrave, Sherington, Bannockburn, Deansfield, Halstow, Greenacres, Discovery and Eltham C of E. The secondary schools involved are Crown Woods Stationers Academy and Harris Academy Greenwich.

The event is being promoted by the Greenwich Music Hub service, which aims to give children and young people the opportunity to take part in music at the highest level.

It's also being supported by The Greenwich Music Trust, which has just been relaunched with Jools Holland as patron. The Trust's aim is to extend and enrich the musical opportunities and experiences of all children and young people in the royal borough. The independent charity supports the work of the Royal Greenwich Music Hub – and in particular, it aims to ensure that all musically talented children and young people, whatever their background, have the opportunity to develop their talent and take part in events.

Jools Holland believes the Music Trust plays an important role in nurturing musicians of the future. He said, "We want to make sure that every child in Greenwich has the challenge, reward and sense of belonging that music brings."

● Tickets for Thursday's event are £10, or £5 concs. To book, visit www.southbankcentre.co.uk or call 0844 875 0073.

Jobs bonanza as new M&S gets set to open

NEARLY all of 200 newly-created jobs at a new M&S store in Charlton are going to local people.

Marks and Spencer is due to open its new store on Thursday (July 9) and most of the vacancies have now been filled with scores of jobs for local people. The new store will have a staff of almost 200 – 108 of these have gone to local people while the remaining roles are being filled internally or from redeploying people who lost their jobs when the Woolwich and Lewisham branches closed.

As part of the recruitment process, M&S has been working closely with local organisations including GLLaB, the Greenwich Local Labour and Business jobs service, to provide job opportunities to royal borough residents.

Three of the management roles were filled by GLLaB, including two residents who were unemployed after the closure of Charlton's Matalan store.

M&S traditionally recruits online, but agreed to work with GLLaB to recruit local people including those finding it hardest to get a job. The firm gave a commitment to interview 60 unemployed local residents, supported by GLLaB.

GLLaB, worked with Westminster Kingsway College to compile a six-week pre-employment programme aimed at residents who had little to no experience of working in retail. The training was delivered at the borough's Hospitality and Catering Skills Centre at Charlton Athletic Football Club, and covered qualifications in retail and customer service, combined with work experience in a M&S store in London. It guaranteed a job interview for everyone who completed the process successfully. GLLaB is now working with M&S to run further training to meet extra demand. Store manager, Ken Holdway, said: "We've been inundated with applications and we're delighted to have been able to recruit such a large number of people from the local area. It's going to be an exciting day for everyone at M&S and we're looking forward to opening our doors for business!" Sizwe James, the council's cabinet member for business, employment and skills, said: "This is fantastic news and adds to the new jobs offered to local people by the new neighbouring Sainsbury's store which opened last week.

The council is determined to work with new businesses and employers to ensure that residents have as many chances as possible to access training and job opportunities within the borough, as this is a key strand of our anti-poverty work."

● The new store will have the traditional M&S food and clothing departments, plus a 190-seat restaurant, free parking for customers, a food ordering service and in-store or online ordering service.

been present at the opening of the fantastic new Sainsbury's store in Charlton and wish all the staff the best of luck as they open for business.

"Our partnership with Sainsbury's has seen us secure another 135 new jobs for local residents, delivering on a key priority for the council. The opening also shows that more than ever, the royal borough is the place where businesses of all sizes want to come and prosper."

Gerald Lewis from Woolwich is one of the new employees at Sainsbury's who was recruited through GLLaB and now works as a nightshift assistant. He said: "I had been looking for work since February but hadn't been able to secure any. GLLaB explained that there would be jobs coming up at Sainsbury's and that they would keep me updated."

"GLLaB sent my CV directly to Sainsbury's - and they invited me to an induction session. I was successful and started my new job. Everything has turned out just right - the hours and the location are perfect for me."

Claire Darkins from Charlton is working in the clothing section of the store. She told GT: "As an employee Sainsbury's gives you the opportunity to work your way up in the company and I am happy that I do not have to travel as far to get here, it's a great working environment."

Another new staff member, Emmanuel

LONG SHELF LIFE: new staff get to work at the new store including, above, Emmanuel Achoyin and inset, Claire Darkins

Achoyin from Thamesmead described the recruitment process: "First I had to apply for the job which I found very interesting and detailed, then I had a two-day induction process which was very motivating and gave me an insight of the working environment. Now day-to-day, I code control - which means I look for out-of-date products and make sure the shelves are tidy."

Cllr Sizwe James, cabinet member for business, employment and skills told GT: "The fact that 135 new jobs have been created by the opening of the new Sainsbury's store for residents is great news for the royal borough. The council is committed to working with companies such as Sainsbury's to ensure that local people benefit from the presence of new stores and developments that come to the local area."

Sainsbury's is continuing to make investments across the royal borough. Recently there has been a refurbishment project at the Woolwich store with new self-service tills installed. Next month Sainsbury's will open another brand new store in Abbey Wood, which is expected to create up to 400 new jobs.

MAKING FRIENDS: Forum members at the launch

A HUNDRED and fifty people, including the royal borough's deputy mayor Cllr Olu Babatola, attended the official launch of the Caribbean Social Forum - a support group predominantly for elderly people from the Caribbean. Derelict eyesore reborn as a family home

BEFORE AND AFTER: the derelict and rundown house transformed into a habitable home

Correction

Apologies. Our story Festival Feast (GT June 16) about local food businesses trading at the Royal Greenwich Film Festival contained a mis-spelling of the company Mishmish Arabic and Mediterranean Street Food.

RESIDENTS in Spencer Gardens, Eltham, breathed a sign of relief when Number 11 was sold to a developer.

It had been standing derelict and empty for about 20 years, and was in an appalling state. Neighbours were constantly complaining to the council, asking if something could be done.

Local councillors and council officers tried many times, without success, to persuade the elderly owner to sell it. So eventually steps were taken by the authority to issue a compulsory order. Shortly after this process began, the owner sold it privately to a developer, who called in builders who restored it to modern standards. It is now a proper family home again, and has gone on the market. The original owner is now in sheltered accommodation.

Cllr Chris Kirby, the council's cabinet member for housing and human resources, said: "There were complex legal issues here, and we supported and advised the owner throughout the process, trying to get the best for all involved."

"Empty properties can be an eyesore and can attract vandals or squatters. If brought back into use they can provide a home for people in housing need. We want to find out about long-term empty, privately-owned housing that has been abandoned or is derelict. We will make contact with the owners and offer them support to bring their properties back into use. Where properties have been neglected over a long period of time we will consider taking action to bring about their improvement to get them back into use."

● To report a long-term empty property, contact the council's Disability and Home Improvement team on 020 8921 2862 or email emptyhomes@royalgreenwich.gov.uk. Loans and grants might be available for owners of empty properties to help meet the costs of repairs and improvements. More at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/emptyproperties

Community partnership boost for Gardens

by Dan Stephens

LOCAL people are welcome to an event to mark the completion of the first phase of improvements to Rockliffe Gardens this Saturday (July 4).

It's the royal borough's official re-opening of the beautiful green space in Plumstead. The free event, celebrates the past, present and future of the gardens and marks the success of a fruitful partnership between the council and the local community who have worked together to establish the Friends of Rockliffe Gardens group.

Workers on a special council jobs scheme have also been heavily involved. The 'HILL' (Highways Improvement Local Labour) scheme has been set up by the council to provide work for unemployed residents to make improvements to local roads and open spaces.

It means they can get valuable skills and training, while the council can deliver improvements above and beyond the scheduled maintenance programme.

HILL is part of Greenwich Local Labour and Business (GLLaB), the council's job service which matches local people with local job and training vacancies and apprenticeships.

The HILL workers teamed up with construction company Riney to re-pave part of the Gardens in the first stage of the improvements - with further work planned in the near future. A significant amount of pruning and tidying up has also been undertaken by the council to help make the Gardens a beautiful place for local residents to enjoy.

The launch event runs from 1.30pm to 4pm in the Gardens off Camdale Road in Plumstead. During the afternoon there will be information on the interesting history of the gardens and future improvement works.

Hadlow College and Art Plumstead are running stalls offering taster sessions to visitors, local councillors will be present and there will be an opportunity to sign up to the new Friends group.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the council's cabinet member for community safety and environment said: "The improvements we have seen at Rockliffe Gardens shows fantastic progress and is hugely positive news for local residents. This is a great example of the council engaging with the local community and I urge residents to come along to the event on Saturday and see for themselves the results we have achieved by working together."

Cllr Danny Thorpe, cabinet member for regeneration and transport told GT: "It's really great news that local people working on the HILL project have been involved in this positive project. It further illustrates the great work the council and GLLaB does in providing opportunities for learning and development and prospects for participants."

● For further information on Rockliffe Gardens and the upcoming event, visit www.rockliffegardens.weebly.com
● Visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/gllab for more details in getting involved with GLLaB.

Choose to re-use

A safer way to give

The royal borough has outperformed the London average for recycling rates in the last two years as well as achieving the third lowest percentage of landfill in the capital - just outside the top 20 councils in the country. But the message is clear - by working together, the borough can do even better.

To mark National Recycling Week 2015 (22-28 June) the council's recycling teams took their message out at Roadshows at local supermarkets, public buildings and major events, emphasising the importance of recycling and how its residents can help increase the amount of waste which is turned back into reusable materials.

Part of the message included promoting the full range of items that can be recycled in the royal borough. The council's weekly dedicated household recycling service collects everything from coloured glass, tin foil, empty aerosol tins, junk mail, books, ready meals packaging and plastic bottles.

The waste for recycling is taken to the royal borough's Mixed Recycling Facility (MRF) where it goes through a series of sophisticated machines which separate the waste into specific types of materials to be recycled.

The MRF is based at the same site as the royal borough's Reuse and Recycle Centre in Thamesmead on Nathan Way, SE28 0AF. The Centre is open seven days a week and accepts a larger range of items, including many (such as furniture and white goods) which cannot be collected in the weekly doorstep service.

Batteries and electrical waste should also be safely disposed of using the dedicated bins at recycling banks (also known as bring sites). Small electrical items can also be disposed of using the council's to think of the local environment and keep working hard to recycle their household waste at every opportunity.

Councillor Jackie Smith, the council's cabinet member for community safety and environment told GT: "We are committed to continually increasing what items can be recycled and also making our waste and recycling services simple and convenient for local people.

"Most people now recognise how important it is that we do what we can to safeguard the environment. Therefore, by taking those simple routine steps to educate ourselves and our families about what we can recycle, we all help protect the environment by sending less recyclable waste to landfill or incineration."

● For full details of what can be recycled from home, or taken to the Reuse and Recycle Centre free kerbside collection service. There is also a new collection centre due to be opened next week in the Orangery Lane car park in Eltham increasing the recycling options for local people.

The royal borough has achieved consistently good rates of recycling in recent years, yet overall the capital is seeing a decline in recycling. The council is committed to improving its rates wherever possible and as always, residents are urged

THE royal borough is working hard to help local people safely support charities at the forefront of humanitarian aid responses - including the ongoing conflict in Syria.

Alongside the UK Government and Charity Commission, the council is offering useful advice to help people choose the safest and best ways to support those in need.

A few things to think about before donating to your chosen charity:

● The quickest, safest and most effective way of supporting those in need in places such as Syria is by contributing to a registered charity in the UK

● Check that your chosen charity is registered with the Charity Commission. You can check this at www.charitycommission.gov.uk

● Ask for a charity collector's ID and the charity's name and registration number if you are in any doubt.

● If you have any concerns about someone who is planning to travel to Syria, you should contact the police, dial 101 or contact the Anti-Terrorist hotline confidentially on 0800 789 321.

The royal borough and Metropolitan Police encourage people and families to have the confidence to come forward at the earliest opportunity so that they can intervene and help. This is not about criminalising people, it is about preventing tragedies.

Hospice fundraisers reach new heights as mountaineers

A TEAM from Berkeley Homes, developers of the Woolwich Arsenal site, climbed the UK's highest mountain to raise funds for the Demelza children's hospice in Eltham.

The group was hoping their attempt would raise £6,000 for the charity – and they reached this over a weekend when they tackled Ben Nevis near Fort William in Scotland.

Team member Nigel Davis said: "The trek went really well and what a fantastic amount of money we raised! Demelza has a great bunch of supporters – everyone was so friendly and helpful and I spoke with so many wonderful people. Every one of them talked about the cause and the great team at Demelza."

Demelza became the designated charity for Berkeley Homes in 2012 and through various events the firm has raised more than £174,000. Emma Austen, Demelza's events co-ordinator, said: "I am still feeling lost for words about how amazing the trek was. It was a lot tougher than we all thought it would be but the whole team supported each other which was fabulous to see. I am overwhelmed at the positive comments I've had from everyone and the amount of money which has been raised – it will make a real difference to our children and families."

Demelza's next challenge is a Sittingbourne to Amsterdam bike ride at the end of April next year. For more information or to sign up, go to www.demelza.org.uk

Charity dinner boosts earthquakes fund

THE borough's fund-raising campaign for victims of the devastating Nepalese earthquakes received a £1,100 boost from a charity dinner at Woolwich Public Hall on Friday, June 19.

Organised by community leaders Sonia and Fatta Thapa, the £25-a-head event showcased Nepal's rich heritage, with dancing, costumes from different tribes, and traditional food and music. More than a hundred performers took part. They included street and Irish dancers, showing how different communities had come together to support the appeal. Awards were given to local people who had worked tirelessly to raise funds.

Guests included actor Edward Akrouit, best known for his role in the television series 'The Borgias', and his model wife Shelby Welinder, who were married just a week earlier. The couple have been dedicated supporters of the local relief effort, flying out with soap, toothbrushes, dried food and toys donated by local people to an orphanage in Nepal. Other guests included Eltham MP Clive Efford, deputy mayor Cllr Olu Babatola and former borough mayors.

Sonia Thapa told GT: "I was very happy with the event, it was really nice. The best part was seeing the whole community getting together, from children aged just two years old performing, to a 95-year-old Nepalese woman, who lives locally, who was modelling costumes."

School governor awarded MBE for services to education

by Ronnie Woods

A GOVERNOR at several Royal Greenwich schools was recognised in the Queen's Birthday Honours List earlier this month.

Bob Love, the local authority governor for Morden Mount and other primary schools in Greenwich, was made a Member of the British Empire in the Queen's Birthday Honours List on June 12 for his services in education.

Bob has been recognised for his role in supporting and lending his knowledge with several royal borough schools. He is a National Leader of Governance and has supported several governing bodies in Greenwich including Deansfield, Boxgrove, Nightingale, Kidbrooke Park, Heronsgate, Waterside, Morden Mount and Foxfield schools.

He's also a long-serving member of SACRE (the Standing Advisory Council on Religious Education which advises on religious worship in schools), a representative of the Church of England and has had a significant role in helping to write the Greenwich RE syllabus as well as being a lay inspector for Ofsted.

The MBE recognises people who have made achievements in public life, committed themselves to serving Britain, made the lives of others better or are outstanding at what they do. Its presentation is decided by an honours committee and then handed to the Prime Minister and then to the Queen, who awards the honour. Bob was nominated by his wife Anne.

The award winner said: "I was very pleased to receive my MBE for the award puts the spotlight on school governors - that vast army of unpaid volunteers who devote their time and energy to promoting the education of children. This award recognises that over the years I have been able to make an effective contribution to the education of children in Greenwich schools, but my continuing reward comes from seeing the children make progress in their learning and being prepared for adult life."

He added: "Greenwich schools are now amongst the best in the country and I like to think that in my own very small way I have contributed to this improvement in standards."

Councillor John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "It is a privilege and great joy to have one of our hard working governors, recognized for the award. He is testament and fine example of someone who embodies what the Queen's Honours stand for."

ROYAL borough of GREENWICH

A real force toge

A GREAT time at the Great Get Together and Armed Forces Day Event.

by Ronnie Woods

TENS OF thousands of people turned out in the sun for the Royal Borough's annual Great Get Together Armed Forces Day Event.

One of the UK's largest Armed Forces Day events returned to Woolwich, combined with the Great Get Together Festival, the Royal Borough of Greenwich's big summer community celebration last Saturday.

People were treated to an array of stalls including the live music stage, healthy living zone and sports try-out sessions, armed forces stalls, a Nepalese community marquee and the Council's own 'Your Borough, Your Views' stand, where residents were able to give their views on council services and meet local councillors.

Favourite activities included vintage motorbikes and military vehicles, children's crafts, caving attraction, zorbing balls and laser tag, family funfair and lots more. The arena hosted many displays like the Veterans' Parade, Band of Gurkhas, dog and falconry displays, Llama handling, Motostunts vehicle stunt show and The Tigers Parachute Display Team.

Diana Francis from Abbey Wood was there with her grandsons and told GT: "I love coming here every year because you get a chance to come and see the council and see what they do, as well as see the Armed Forces on parade. It's always a great family event with so much to do for the kids and they learn so much from it."

Przemek Kopacz from Plumstead said "I've come here today with my family and to meet with my friends who suggested we come. This is our first time coming to Armed Forces Day and it's really great for local people and the community. The weather is nice and hot and the kids are enjoying it."

Roger Wigfield from Sutton said "Lots of things are going on and the weather is perfect. I'm looking forward to the Veterans' ceremony and the Riders from the Royal Household."

Billy Wilson, a favourite pastime of the stunt show, the Llama Handling, the Tigers Parachute Display Team, the Veterans' ceremony and the Riders from the Royal Household."

Councillor of the Royal Borough of Greenwich said "It has been a great turn of events to get to meet the residents. I hear from people about the think about the Council. Even meet so many face in one of our You Can't see the other side of the coin."

also give other people the opportunity to meet as possible. I enjoy the army directly meet the representatives."

The Army comes to afternoon tea

SOLDIERS from the Royal Anglian Regiment at Woolwich Barracks were invited to afternoon tea on Friday by Mulgrave Primary School in Rectory Place, Woolwich.

The school teaches 22 children from forces families living locally, and the children wanted to thank the troops for all the support they give to Mulgrave.

This includes running a get-together called the Royal Mulgrave Club, which takes children on outings to places like the regiment's memorial at Duxford in Cambridgeshire, building a 'forest school' on army land for them to learn in an outdoors environment, and organising running races with an army PT instructor. The Anglians also organised a 'Soldiers for Breakfast' event, when troops arrived with porridge and persuaded the children to try it because it was a lot nicer than they may have thought.

Friday's event, which was opened by former borough mayor Cllr Mick Hayes, was held the day before Armed Forces Day and the Great Greenwich Get-together. It was called the 'Great British Tea Party', and involved children serving sandwiches and cakes they had made to the soldiers.

The school choir entertained the troops with a Union Flag as their backdrop and the soldiers put up their Royal Anglian bouncy castle for the children to play on.

Sue Gardner, Mulgrave's head of inclusion, said: "We have 22 children here from Royal Anglian families, and other units, and there are another 20 at Eglinton Primary and other schools in the borough. When the regiment arrived we thought we needed to be more proactive with them. We are a multi-cultural school where 50 different languages are spoken, and we are in a garrison town. The service children told us they were grateful for what was being done for them, and wanted this event. A lot of people just see the army as a fighting force. The children here are very proud that that their fathers are soldiers, so this event was to promote a more positive image of the army to show that it's more than just fighting.

"We have a brought six of the children to the event."

Union flag raised ready for Armed Forces Day

A flag-raising ceremony was held at the front of Woolwich Town Hall last Monday (June 22) to herald Saturday's Armed Forces Day celebrations. The Union Flag was raised by a serving soldier, watched by locally-based service personnel including the Woolwich Station Commander, Lt Col Bob Christopher, with Maj Gerry Porter.

Along with civic leaders, who included the Mayor of Royal Greenwich, Cllr Norman Adams and borough councillors, the event was attended by veterans from each of the borough's Royal British Legion branches of Eltham and Well Hall, Thamesmead and Abbey Wood, and Charlton and Blackheath. Also present were members of the Royal Naval Association and the Royal Air Force Association, and veterans from the Royal Navy and the Royal Engineers.

Similar ceremonies were held at the same time by local authorities throughout the country. In the borough, it marked the countdown to the royal borough's Great Get Together festival on Saturday, which was combined with celebrations for Armed Forces Day at the Royal Artillery Barracks in Woolwich.

U-BOAT VICTIM: Entries where merchant ship crew members died in action were logged in red

Stories of navy heroes are told at last

THE stories of thousands of heroic sailors from First World War merchant ships can now be told for the first time, thanks to a four-year project by the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich.

Working with the National Archives, 400 volunteers from around the world, including France, Mexico, Japan, Australia, Italy as well as the UK, have worked from home to transcribe the details and service records of crews serving on 39,000 voyages during 1915 – a total of 750,000 seamen.

The information has come from electronic copies of the handwritten crew lists of different ships, held by the archives. They include names, addresses, ranks, ages, and wages – typically £3 a week. Although the ships were all British registered, their crews came from all over the globe, including Barbados, Calcutta, New York, Malta, Paris, Russia and Sweden. Every sailor had to fill in their details in ink and by hand. And for those who couldn't write, it was done for them by the ship's master or captain, with the sailor initialling his mark alongside.

They will be a treasure house of information for people keen to trace their family histories, as well as social and maritime historians. It is one of the very few sources of information on merchant seafarers from 1915.

Museum archivist Martin Salmon said: "During the Great War in 1915, these merchant ship sailors were behind the scenes during war, making sure our country got fed. They did not sign up to get shot at, but they found themselves on the front line. The 400 keen volunteers who transcribed the crew lists included many former merchant sailors and showed there is a global interest in the merchant navy."

No other similar records for individual merchant seamen from this period exist, and the crew lists are the only surviving documents to tell what they experienced. The project unearthed many tales of heroism and courage. They included the first Victoria Cross awarded in the merchant navy. It went to Frederick Daniel Parslow master of the cargo vessel Anglo-Californian which was chartered by the Admiralty to transport horses. On July 4, 1915, it was sunk by a German U-boat 90 miles off the Irish Coast.

Parslow heroically stood his ground against the enemy for hours, and was killed by one of the numerous shells that were hit the ship's bridge. The second mate, who happened to be Parslow's eldest son, was forced to lie down among the wreckage to continue navigating, until help reached the ship.

All the details contained in the crew lists will be available to search online from today (June 30) at rmg.co.uk/1915crewlists

In celebration of the Year of Mexico in the UK, spectators will be treated to the world premiere of The Four Fridas at the Royal Artillery Barracks Woolwich.

The showcase, one of the centrepieces of this year's festival, will whisk audiences into the colourful and spectacular world of renowned artist Frida Kahlo. The artist had a lifelong empathy for indigenous Mexico and The Four Fridas will feature a unique and powerful pre-Hispanic Mexican cultural tradition.

Incorporating ritual, music, speech and contemporary dance, events will be played against a stunning video projection in the sky. The breathtaking ceremony features a 20m wooden pole and dazzling aerial choreography. And for the first time ever, a group of indigenous women from the tiny remote village of Xochiapulcho in the Sierra Puebla, will travel to London to enact the extraordinary flight of the Voladores.

"Frida Kahlo is recognised as one of the most significant artists of the 20th century. Her work reflects her turbulent and colourful life, exploring themes of birth, death and survival. Having contracted polio and suffered severe injuries in a traffic accident, she spent long periods in bed.

MARKING the 40th anniversary of the original film and the 50th anniversary of The Who, a new production - The Who's Tommy - plays a limited run at Greenwich Theatre next month.

Based on the iconic 1969 double-album rock opera, which later became a film of the same title, The Who's Tommy is an exhilarating musical about hope, healing, and the human spirit. The story of the pinball-playing, deaf, dumb and blind boy who triumphs over his adversities has inspired and amazed audiences for more than 40 years and the production comes 20 years after Tommy was last seen in London. This version is staged and directed by award-winning director Michael Strassen with music and lyrics by Pete Townshend, a member of The Who since 1962, and additional music and lyrics by John Entwistle and Keith Moon. The title role of Tommy will be played by Ashley Birchall (pictured). The Who's Tommy runs from July 29 - August 23. Further details on 020 8858 7755 or www.greenwichtheatre.org.uk

Magna-ficent Carta

VISITORS to the Greenwich Heritage Centre in Woolwich were able to get within touching distance of one of the most important documents in history.

A facsimile of Magna Carta – the document that laid down the basics of English law and freedoms – was put on display to mark the 800-year anniversary of it being signed with the seal of King John on the banks of the River Thames at Runnymede near Windsor. This was witnessed by 25 barons, including Geoffrey de Saye, then the Lord of West Greenwich.

Visitors to the centre in Artillery Place were able to view it, and read a modern translation in a takeaway leaflet. Families with children were invited to have a go at making their own scroll at a free drop-in session.

Other local celebrations included information films from the British Library on the Big Screen in General Gordon Square, Woolwich, and a screening of Disney's Robin Hood – a cartoon version of the story about the legendary outlaw who fought the injustices caused by King John.

Magna Carta also formed the cornerstone of the idea of liberty and law, both in England and across the world. It inspired the US Declaration of Independence, the European Convention on Human Rights and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

GAME ON: Cllr John Fahy attended the launch with Jon Horne from Sport England, school staff and pupils

On the ball for on court action

NIGHTINGALE school pupils have the perfect pitch to play bat and ball.

The school marked the opening of their brand new sports court last Monday during National School Sports Week (June 22-26) a celebration of school sport run by the Youth Sport Trust charity.

The new court, which is also available to the local community provides another pitch in Woolwich, and means the school can run an enhanced PE and sport curriculum with many sports activities such as football, netball, hockey and basketball.

It was funded with £52,000 from Sports England, which helps schools create sporting habits for life by investing in projects that will get more people playing sport. A further £30,000 was raised through school fundraising.

Ian Goldsmith, Nightingale's PE specialist teacher said: "The court has been designed to get the children working in small sided games, allowing all the students the opportunity to play in a much more controlled environment."

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for children's services, said: "It is fitting to launch this new sports court during National School Sports Week when thousands of schools across the country make a pledge to get more involved in physical activity, school sport and celebrating school achievement."

thought I would have the opportunity to come back to Crown Woods, and be able to give something back to the school.

"I presented the award and gave a talk about my academy - and my old headmaster and some of my old classmates were there as well, so it was really amazing."

After the match, former international professional Collymore pitted his bowling skills against some of the young players. He said: "I had no hesitation in supporting Junaid's academy. He is role model for young children and I have no doubt he will be one of cricket's future stars. For me kids are our future and Nadir's Academy has given children the platform to grow into themselves and build confidence. It challenges them to be better and gives them direction in life. Cricket brings people together and has helped these boys mature into young men. We look forward to getting more children in Greenwich involved in the coming months."

Junaid, still just 18, said he had been 'shocked' by the academy's success in such a short time. He said: "It's been such a pleasure and such an honour to do this and give back to the children of my local community. For me as a student a few years ago that would have been a dream come true. Now, to give it back and see the smiles on the children's faces is something money can't buy."

Pupils bowled over by cricket legend

by Ronnie Woods

YOUNG cricketers at Crown Woods College in Eltham had the chance to play against West Indian legend Corey Collymore during a match at the school.

It was organised by former pupil Junaid Nadir, the driving force behind the recently-launched Nadir Youth Academy for young sports enthusiasts.

The match was against Haberdashers' Aske's Crayford Academy, who went on to win. But the day was an emotional triumph for Junaid. He said: "It was a great game, particularly because only a few weeks before some of the kids taking part couldn't even hold a cricket bat! I've had a lot of support for my academy from people all over the country, and I never
